Sixty percent of Massachusetts voters believe the state should legalize marijuana for recreational use, a new WBUR poll shows, but nearly all voters, including most Democrats, say it should be regulated. Gov. Charlie Baker has said he opposes such legislation, but earlier this year the state House voted to decriminalize possession of small amounts of pot. The new WBUR poll found that 59 percent of voters in the state believe marijuana should be legalized. Just 38 percent of Massachusetts voters oppose it, and 5 percent said they are unsure. A new poll from WBUR, conducted by the University of Massachusetts Boston, shows 59 percent of voters in the state believe marijuana should be legalized. A new poll from WBUR, conducted by the University of Massachusetts Boston, shows 59 percent of voters in the state believe marijuana should be legalized. Share this - A majority of Democrats, 56 percent, support legalization, as do about half of independents, 52 percent, and about a third of Republicans, 31 percent. Attorney General Maura Healey and two other high-profile Democrats have said they want to see marijuana legalized for adult recreational use, a position President Donald Trump and several high-profile Republicans share. Trump has said that even if states legalized recreational marijuana, the federal government would not intervene. The Senate Judiciary Committee voted along party lines on Tuesday to recommend the House vote to allow adults to legally possess and use small amounts of marijuana for recreational use. The WBUR poll found that 56 percent of Massachusetts voters think marijuana should be legalized for recreational use, compared to 38
