The code compiles without issue, and runs fine, but I get a warning saying: Undefined reference to `g_main_context_new' in the coverage log. I'm not sure why pycharm thinks this is an error, since the function does in fact exist in python. I'm not sure what I'm missing here. Thanks in advance for any insight! A: The g_main_context_new() is a C function. You can't access it from python. If you need to test your python code, you should use one of the coverage tools that have an interface to python. Q: Why does my chart have no borders? I am creating a chart in sharepoint using visual studio. My chart has a border and title but is it possible to make the background of the chart transparent? A: Right click on the chart, go to properties and set background color = transparent. A: Right click on the chart and click "Properties". You will see the option "Background color", Click the "colors" tab and select a "color" which is #00000000 in RGB format. A: If you are using the 'Modern Experience' portal, this won't work. The border is considered part of the look and feel and the drop-down you get is filled ca3bfb1094

Edit all your drawings with markup at once No more searching for the drawing you need, or searching through options on the Ribbon just to get to it. You have a single dropdown menu with all of your drawings in your project, and the option to select the drawing you want. (video: 1:30 min.) Share more of your design on paper Share only selected details of a drawing or a selected annotation. Choose the details you want to keep private with the new annotation and annotation capture feature. (video: 1:45 min.) Add sheet numbers to drawings with annotations and sheet capture Generate accurate sheet numbers for your drawings. The annotations (annotations on the page margins) and sheet capture (capturing entire sheets to one file) are tied together so the annotation always references the sheet number of the captured sheet. No more out of order sheet numbers or orphaned drawings. (video: 1:15 min.) Apply color themes to drawings based on company branding Add a color scheme to all your drawings. It's easy to choose colors from the stock color palette, or select from over 2,000 color options. (video: 1:30 min.) Save drawings on a new drawing page Save drawings on a new drawing page. You can move all the drawings from one project to another, making new pages for each, by selecting File > Save As. (video: 1:30 min.) Configure the length of time your drawing is displayed in the Paperworks window Configure the length of time your drawing is displayed in the Paperworks window. By default, it's 5 minutes. You can change this to 15 minutes, an hour, or 3 hours. This setting helps you view the entire drawing before making changes. (video: 1:45 min.) Add data to drawings in the PDF format Share your drawings in the PDF format. The PDF export of AutoCAD can be configured with rich metadata from the Markup Assistant and Markup Import. You can add a title, author, keywords, and license for your drawings. This makes it easy for users to share your drawings on their own websites. (video: 1:30 min.) New Family Tab: Add a page to your drawings with the Family Tab. You can organize your drawings into a structure that gives them a logical name. This makes it easier for users
