I'm working on a PHP project and am having a bit of a problem, maybe you can help me out! I have two tables: "users" - "id" - "name" - "time_zone_id" "time_zones" - "id" - "name" "users" has a foreign key to "time_zones". I'm using a framework that makes it difficult for me to change the associations. So now I need to change the foreign key from "time_zones" to "users". I have a "data" table with the following values: id:1, name:"UTC", time_zone_id:1 id:2, name:"GMT", time_zone_id:2 The time zone id's match the id's of the "time_zones" table. I've tried to create a migration file to change the foreign key from "time_zones" to "users" and it seems to work fine. The only problem is that it only matches the data I have and not any new data. Is there a more efficient way of going about this? A: I'm using a framework that makes it
