Elements: The Photoshop alternative Adobe Photoshop Elements is a full version of Photoshop that contains fewer features but is easier to use. Like Photoshop, it's a layer-based editing system, but it comes with simplified tools, such as the tools for drawing, painting, and photo retouching. You can work with multiple overlays to create transparency, and you can save in any format. When you export your files, you can

Sub menu Social Icons About DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Iran's president says it's possible to reach a nuclear accord with the U.S. after years of hostility over the country's disputed nuclear activities. President Hassan Rouhani offered hints at a potential easing of tensions, calling for a new day of mutual respect, according to the official IRNA news agency. Rouhani said Saturday after talks with visiting U.S. congressional delegation that the Islamic Republic was ready to return to international negotiations, according to his chief of staff, Esfandiar Rahim Mashaei. The U.S. and other Western nations suspect Iran's nuclear program was aimed at building atomic weapons. Iran denies seeking the bomb, saying its peaceful nuclear program is meant to generate electricity and produce medical radioisotopes. The U.S. and the United Nations' top nuclear watchdog have imposed a series of punitive measures against Iran, saying it has violated a nuclear deal with world powers and agreed to curb its nuclear activities in exchange for relief from sanctions. Rouhani has suggested the approach might not work, saying in a speech Thursday that the U.S. could not trust the Islamic Republic. He also has called on the West to back an Iranian-led initiative to ease tensions in the Middle East. Mashaei said Rouhani and President Barack Obama “underlined the need to make an effort to get out of the wall of hostility toward each other.” The U.S. delegation included Rep. Kay Granger, D-Texas, the chairwoman of the House of Representatives Appropriations subcommittee that funds the State Department. Negotiations over the nuclear deal are deadlocked because of disagreements over what inspections would entail. Granger said the U.S. was ready to resume talks, although White House spokesman Jay Carney said the sides needed to give time to resolve the impasse. “It’s possible to come back to the table,” Granger said. She called the Obama administration’s decision to send the letter stopping further talks a “tactic and not an overture” and said her main message to the Iranians was “this is the best time to come together.” Rouhani said the latest round of nuclear negotiations, which began last month, marked a “historic turning point

Q: Fail to activate a specific repository in Aptana Studio 3 I recently installed Aptana Studio 3.2.2 on a Mac OS X 10.7. I have this project which using redmine's git repository (). I have clone the project successfully, but I failed to activate the repository. Please help me to activate it. Thank you very much. A: Activate the repository means: Open Aptana Studio Open the project you want to use the repository Select "Edit" -> "Preferences" Open the "General" tab If there is no "git" subtab in the "Preferences" dialog, it means that there is no git repository configured in the project. In case there is, check that the URL is set to the redmine repository. It can be found at the URL in the project properties. For more info about "Preferences" dialog, see: the authors, the good news is that the major share of the sectoral production of EVs in China is represented by electric motorcycle production, a sector where China has already the leadership. However, there are many challenges China still has to face before it can play such a leading role in electric vehicles in the world, as well as a major role in the electric-powered transport sector. There are many other sectors or countries that are emerging to catch up with China in electric vehicle manufacturing. Foremost among these is the global automotive industry, where China has to lead the manufacturing boom of electric vehicles to level the playing field. China is not the only region where the automotive industry is moving towards electrification. In the recent decade, several Southeast Asian countries have been making a major push towards electrified vehicles. Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia — all very large markets in the Southeast Asia region — are all adopting policies aimed at closing the gap between western and Chinese electric car standards and China’s dominant lithium-ion battery technology.

Indonesia, in particular, is heavily investing in the electric vehicle sector by, for example, launching the nationwide “Electric Roadmap 2050”, that aims to shift the country to fully electric vehicles by 2050.
