Field of the Invention This invention relates to a sieve sack assembly which is mounted above the tailgate of the pickup truck or van and which can be folded down around the tailgate for loading large or bulky objects into the pickup bed. 2. Description of the Prior Art In the past, loading large or bulky items into the bed of a pickup truck or van has been a difficult and cumbersome task. Normally, the bed of the pickup truck or van is considerably wider than that of a typical automobile and as a result, the load must be spread out in the pickup truck or van so that there is sufficient clearance between the load and the side walls of the pickup truck or van. However, this is often not sufficient clearance to allow sufficient maneuverability to place the load in the pickup truck or van bed. Consequently, although the size of the pickup truck or van does not allow loading, the size of the load is such that the area provided for loading cannot be easily used. As a result, the normal procedure has been to load the larger objects into an automobile or van and then transfer the load to the pickup truck or van. This procedure has obvious drawbacks and is a tedious process which is time consuming and costly. Various devices have been proposed in the past which are designed to assist in loading the smaller objects into the pickup truck or van. However, many of these devices are cumbersome and difficult to operate. More importantly, these devices have failed to account for the fact that the pickup truck or van is only wide enough to handle objects of a certain size. For example, in U.S. Pat. No. 3,957,286, a baggage carrier assembly is disclosed which is fixedly mounted in the pickup truck or van. When it is used, the baggage carrier assembly extends outwardly away from the tailgate for at least a predetermined distance to clear the bed of the pickup truck or van. As a result, there is no room to load bulky objects such as mattresses into the pickup truck or van. Similarly, in U.S.
