form of doubly degenerate gravity, known as doubly degenerate type (DTD), and also exists for spinors. Doubly degenerate gravity has a striking feature; the higher degree of symmetry of the spacetime permits the conservation of a particular spin and metric. Unlike the ordinary Einstein field equation, the doubly degenerate Einstein field equation does not include a curvature term, and the space is static. The gravitons are propagating with the speed of light. A doubly degenerate space is one that has a degeneracy in the sense that it becomes a standard Einstein space when one of the independent fields is set to zero. An example would be that of a space formed by two Einstein spaces. Doubly degenerate spaces can be found in string theory. A doubly degenerate metric can be written . In that equation, is the Ricci scalar curvature is the metric component of the second rank symmetric tensor is the completely antisymmetric (second rank) contravariant (0-form) and is the completely antisymmetric (second rank) covariant (1-form) forms that we represent by The components and vanish and the components of, namely and, are related by where is the symmetry factor.
